

THE ABRAHAM ACCORDS

A FIVE YEAR REPORT

We're here this afternoon to change the course of history. After decades of division and conflict, we mark the dawn of a new Middle East. Thanks to the great courage of the leaders of these three countries, we take a major stride toward a future in which people of all faiths and backgrounds live together in peace and prosperity....

Together, these agreements will serve as the foundation for a comprehensive peace across the entire region—something which nobody thought was possible, certainly not in this day and age; maybe in many decades from now—but one founded on shared interests, mutual respect, and friendship.

LETTER FROM

Dr. Kevin D. Roberts

President of The Heritage Foundation

President Donald Trump achieved many policy victories during his first Administration, but perhaps the greatest national security success was the forging of The Abraham Accords.

The opening of formal ties between Israel and the United Arab Emirates, Bahrain, and Morocco, with additional diplomatic relations with Sudan and Kosovo, marked a watershed moment in the history of the Middle East. More than the bilateral agreements themselves, the Accords signify that old enmities can be resolved in the pursuit of future prosperity.

President Trump has cemented his legacy as peacemaker during the early days of his second Administration, having ended conflicts between India and Pakistan, the Democratic Republic of Congo and Rwanda, Cambodia and Thailand, and Armenia and Azerbaijan.

Historically, the Arab–Israeli conflict has been among the world’s most intractable. Under President Trump’s leadership, that is no longer the case. Rather than remain in perpetual conflict, the members of the Accords are forging a new future that recognizes their shared interests, opportunities, and identity not as Jews and Muslims, but as the descendants of Abraham.

Fundamentally, however, The Abraham Accords are a great testament to the enduring strength of Western Civilization and Judeo–Christian values. Faced with the growing threat from the enemies of the West, it was to the United States and Israel—the West’s leader and its sole representative in the Middle East, respectively—that the Accords’ member countries looked for partnership and support.

As an advocate for and defender of Western Civilization and its Judeo–Christian roots, The Heritage Foundation acquired the mission of the renowned Abraham Accords Peace Institute (AAPI) in April 2025. AAPI had immense positive impacts on regional stability in the Middle East and national security here at home during its four-year mission. Now, uniting AAPI’s unique perspective and network with Heritage’s deep policy and security expertise, The Heritage Foundation will advance the peace process in the region for a safer and more prosperous America.

I am pleased to present The Abraham Accords: A Five-Year Report as a Heritage publication celebrating the success and progress of the Accords at this milestone. It is my hope and belief that this will be only the first of many more such reports issued in the years ahead as the Children of Abraham find more ways to cooperate and collaborate as they create a bright future in their shared region.

LETTER FROM

Dr. Victoria Coates and Robert Greenway

The Heritage Foundation

As we celebrate five years of the historic Abraham Accords, we are proud to present this report looking back at all that the Accords have achieved and looking forward to the fulfillment of their tremendous potential.

When we worked on the diplomatic process that would culminate in The Abraham Accords during the first Trump Administration, we had high hopes that they would open the door to a new era of peace and cooperation in the Middle East. At the same time, the region remained a volatile arena with destabilizing actors hostile to U.S. interests who would seek to undermine any momentum toward peace.

Five years after the signing of the Accords, we can say with certainty that President Trump's vision for a warm regional peace based on American leadership and strategic cooperation with our allies and partners has led to a historic shift. Following The Abraham Accords ceremony on the White House lawn in September 2020, we witnessed an unprecedented surge of trade, tourism, innovation cooperation, interfaith dialogue, and civil society initiatives that gave expression to a new model of people-to-people peace in the region. Even in the face of the regional upheaval following Hamas's October 7, 2023, terrorist attacks on Israel and the resulting war in Gaza, The Abraham Accords have remained intact.

In April 2025, The Heritage Foundation assumed the mission of The Abraham Accords Peace Institute (AAPI). We welcome the opportunity to carry on AAPI's critical work of promoting Middle East security, cooperation, and integration in line with America's goals and interests in the region.

Through the Kathryn and Shelby Cullom Davis Institute for National Security and Foreign Policy, including the Davis Institute's Allison Center for National Security, we are engaging with American and regional decision-makers, experts, and thought leaders to expand the circle of normalization. Our team is tracking developments, data, and trends related to these new ties in order to identify opportunities, meet challenges, and communicate the benefits of peace. This five-year Abraham Accords report is an important element of that effort.

We thank all of our partners and supporters for their commitment to our common goal of advancing U.S.-led peace through strength in the Middle East. We look forward to continuing to work together both to strengthen and expand The Abraham Accords and to shape a shared future of security, peace, and prosperity.

The Abraham Accords Declaration:

We, the undersigned, recognize the importance of maintaining and strengthening peace in the Middle East and around the world based on mutual understanding and coexistence, as well as respect for human dignity and freedom, including religious freedom.

We encourage efforts to promote interfaith and intercultural dialogue to advance a culture of peace among the three Abrahamic religions and all humanity.

We believe that the best way to address challenges is through cooperation and dialogue and that developing friendly relations among States advances the interests of lasting peace in the Middle East and around the world.

We seek tolerance and respect for every person in order to make this world a place where all can enjoy a life of dignity and hope, no matter their race, faith or ethnicity.

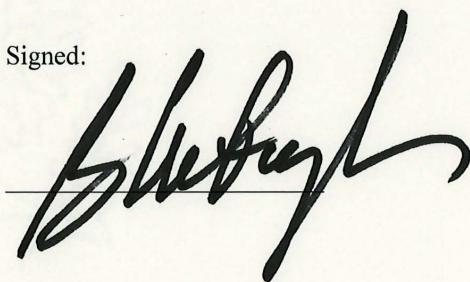

We support science, art, medicine, and commerce to inspire humankind, maximize human potential and bring nations closer together.

We seek to end radicalization and conflict to provide all children a better future.

We pursue a vision of peace, security, and prosperity in the Middle East and around the world.

In this spirit, we warmly welcome and are encouraged by the progress already made in establishing diplomatic relations between Israel and its neighbors in the region under the principles of the Abraham Accords. We are encouraged by the ongoing efforts to consolidate and expand such friendly relations based on shared interests and a shared commitment to a better future.

“ Maybe the most important diplomatic breakthrough of the Trump administration was The Abraham Accords....[Y]ou have got to enable the Israelis and the Sunni Arab states to work together and actually provide a counter-balance to Iran.... After the war, you want to reinvigorate that peace process between Israel, Saudi Arabia, the Jordanians and so forth.

—VICE PRESIDENT J.D. VANCE

“ [T]here [are] a lot of countries out there that would love to enter The Abraham Accords, and obviously we [have] got to get through the situation in Gaza, and that has to get wrapped up in a way that is acceptable to Israel, and makes Israel feel that their security interests are taken into account. But assuming that happens, then I do think you’re going to see more countries entering The Abraham Accords which...was one of the most historic advances in Middle East peace in decades....

—SECRETARY OF STATE MARCO RUBIO

“ One of the President’s key objectives is that The Abraham Accords be expanded, that more countries come into it. We are working on that on my team in coordination with the Secretary of State and the entire State Department. We think that we are going to have some pretty big announcements on countries that are now coming in to the Abraham Peace Accords. And we are hoping for normalization across an array of countries that maybe people would have never contemplated would come in. We are excited for that prospect. That will also be a stabilizer in the Middle East.

—SPECIAL ENVOY TO THE MIDDLE EAST AND
SPECIAL ENVOY FOR PEACE MISSIONS STEVE WITKOFF

“ If you think about what The Abraham Accords did, they took nations that had been, at best, tense, some even enemies, and brought them together. They normalized relations, signed trade and tourism agreements, and created conditions for cooperation that had never before been envisioned.

—U.S. AMBASSADOR TO ISRAEL MIKE HUCKABEE

THE HERITAGE FOUNDATION AND THE ABRAHAM ACCORDS

In April 2025, The Heritage Foundation adopted the mission of The Abraham Accords Peace Institute (AAPI), a nonpartisan nonprofit dedicated to supporting the implementation and expansion of The Abraham Accords.

Initially founded by President Donald Trump's former Senior Advisor Jared Kushner, AAPI was instrumental in promoting these nascent peace deals in the Middle East and ensuring that the renewed regional relationships fulfilled their potential.

Heritage's acquisition of AAPI's mission was part of a broader investment into Israel and the region's future—both of which are vital to America's national security. Two AAPI leaders based in Israel joined the Heritage team as Visiting Fellows to continue this effort.

Even before Heritage's adoption of AAPI's mission, the opportunities created by The Abraham Accords formed a key pillar in Heritage's seminal Special Report, U.S.–Israel Strategy: From Special Relationship to Strategic Partnership, 2029–2047, published in March 2025. This report argued that the U.S. should assist Israel in strengthening its economy and security, particularly through enhanced cooperation with Abraham Accords partners, in order to reorient the bilateral relationship to one reflecting an equal strategic partnership.

Throughout the year, The Heritage Foundation, led by Davis Institute for National Security and Foreign Policy Vice President Dr. Victoria Coates and Allison Center for National Security Director Robert Greenway, engaged with U.S. and Middle Eastern policy leaders and stakeholders to advance The Abraham Accords and U.S. interests in the region. This initiative included meetings in Washington with foreign ministers and ambassadors of Accords member countries as well as travel to the UAE and Israel.

In April, Dr. Coates spoke at the Middle East–America Dialogue (MEAD) Summit in Abu Dhabi, one of the first major conferences in the region to openly include both Arabs and Israelis. Later that month, Dr. Coates, Mr. Greenway, and Senior Policy Analyst Daniel Flesch traveled to Israel, joining Heritage’s Israel-based Senior Research Fellow Eugene Kontorovich and Visiting Fellows Asher Fredman and David Aaronson, to meet with Israel’s Foreign, Defense, and Strategic Affairs Ministers and the ambassadors of Abraham Accords countries in Israel. Coates and Greenway also spoke at a leading national security conference in Jerusalem along with Israel’s Prime Minister and other dignitaries and engaged with local and international media.

In July, Heritage hosted a “Peace Through Strength: U.S. Policy on Israel and the Middle East” conference that focused on The Abraham Accords and economic opportunities as well as the shared threats from Iran and radical terrorist groups. In addition, Heritage’s Visiting Fellows spoke on The Abraham Accords at numerous high-level conferences and events in Israel and India.

The Davis Institute and Allison Center teams have also written and engaged extensively with U.S., regional, and international media on such issues as the importance of the new paradigms for Middle East peace spearheaded by President Trump in his second term, the potential of the India–Middle East–Europe Economic Corridor (IMEC), and the future of the U.S.–Israel strategic alliance.

In July, Heritage launched its dedicated Abraham Accords minisite (heritage.org/abraham-accords), and the Allison Center released its first Abraham Accords quarterly newsletter, providing the most comprehensive picture available of Abraham Accords–related data and trends. These regular newsletters, along with annual and other reports, will track the development of these historic agreements and share the results with important audiences in Washington, Jerusalem, and beyond.

In the coming years, Heritage will continue to support the strengthening and expansion of The Abraham Accords, regional cooperation, and America’s vital interests in the region. We invite all of our partners to sign up for our newsletter and follow our activity in order to stay informed regarding the evolution and impact of U.S.-led peace, normalization, and cooperation in the Middle East.

“ What I’ve seen not just in the Middle East, but in the world and in life, is that when the forces of good are winning, the forces of evil will try to stop them. That’s really what I believe [Hamas’s] terrorist attack was meant to do. Israel’s economy was rocking in terms of all the different growth. It was a very attractive partner to a lot of people in the region. The peace between Israel and Saudi Arabia was progressing incredibly well. That posed a big threat to the forces of evil. If you have The Abraham Accords continuing and everyone coming together, that’s something that obviously people will want to stop. I would say that in light of the attack, The Abraham Accords are more important than ever.... What shifted in the Middle East over the last five years, is progress for economic opportunity. You see what’s happening here in Saudi Arabia.... The Abraham Accords are alive and well, and they are the proper answer to the radicalization and the deprivation that has existed in societies in the Middle East for way too long.

—FORMER SPECIAL ADVISOR TO THE PRESIDENT JARED KUSHNER

“ The Abraham Accords are a legacy of peace for the people of the Middle East and the world. I was proud to work with the President and a great team to secure these historic agreements.

—FORMER U.S. NATIONAL SECURITY ADVISOR ROBERT C. O’BRIEN

The Abraham Accords After Five Years— The Path Traveled and the Way Forward

The Abraham Accords—which led to peace and normalization agreements between Israel and four Arab states in the span of four months—shattered expectations and challenged long-held conventional wisdom regarding Middle East peacemaking, which had been dormant for a quarter of a century.

Numerous factors contributed to making normalization possible between Israel and the United Arab Emirates (UAE), Bahrain, Morocco, and Sudan—a drive toward economic diversification; the need for cutting-edge innovation to meet critical national challenges; cultures and histories of interfaith tolerance; shared threats from Iran, the Muslim Brotherhood, and other extremist groups; and the new frameworks created by the Trump Administration’s Peace to Prosperity plan to resolve Israel–Palestinian conflict.

But without the leadership of President Trump, together with a small team of advisors who displayed a willingness to discard failed paradigms and adopt new approaches, The Abraham Accords would never have come into being.

The official signing of The Abraham Accords on the White House lawn on September 15, 2020, by the U.S., Israel, the UAE, and Bahrain, which were soon joined by Sudan and Morocco, led to an outpouring of cooperation, dialogue, and shared initiatives not just on the intergovernmental level, but on the people-to-people level as well. It immediately became clear that The Abraham Accords represented a new model of warm peace that was very different from the cold peace that existed between Israel and its earlier partners, Egypt and Jordan.

Hundreds of thousands of Israelis eagerly boarded direct flights to their new partners. Cooperative agreements and joint projects were launched in fields ranging from smart agriculture to water recycling, from green hydrogen to space and satellites, from neonatal cardiology to diabetes care, from fintech to cyber security, and in many other areas as well. Trade between Israel and its Abraham Accords partners grew from year to year, and Israeli companies established research and development (R&D) centers and manufacturing plants in Accords countries.

Interfaith dialogue also played an important role in these evolving ties. The shared values of tolerance and coexistence were symbolized by the opening of the Abrahamic Family House in Abu Dhabi, such institutions as Bahrain’s King Hamad Global Centre for Peaceful Coexistence, and the numerous initiatives bringing together Muslims and Jews in Morocco.

On the governmental level, multiple high-level political and diplomatic visits took place, and numerous agreements were signed, including a Comprehensive Economic Partnership Agreement between the UAE and Israel, the UAE’s second such agreement with any country. Defense and security cooperation grew in the fields of air defense, satellites, drones, and homeland security.

The transfer of Israel to the U.S. Defense Department’s Central Command (CENTCOM) Area of Responsibility played a critical role in integrating Israel and its deep security relationship with America into our regional defenses. This move also enabled enhanced military cooperation among the U.S., Israel, and Arab partners and allies, contributing to America’s security and advancing our interests in CENTCOM.

The U.S. and its regional and international partners also established important multilateral frameworks for cooperation, including the I2U2 Group, which includes India, Israel, the U.S., and the UAE, and the Negev Forum, which brought together the U.S., Israel, the UAE, Bahrain, Morocco, and Egypt.

This period, while characterized by warm and growing relations, also highlighted the challenges involved in building bridges between countries, cultures, and business ecosystems that were very different and had not been connected in the past. These challenges ranged from difficulties in executing financial transfers and in travel procedures to disparities in business cultures, priorities, and expectations. As a result, many of the memoranda of understanding (MOUs) signed between Israeli and Arab entities failed to evolve into sustained cooperation, and important intergovernmental initiatives such as a joint Israeli–UAE R&D fund did not progress. Millions of Israeli tourists traveled to other Abraham Accords countries, but a far smaller number of citizens from the Arab Accords member countries visited Israel.

Although Sudan signed The Abraham Accords in January 2021, progress toward full normalization with Israel was interrupted. Following the October 2021 military coup, the Biden Administration froze economic aid to Sudan and turned a cold shoulder to its ruling Transitional Sovereignty Council. Organizations like The Abraham Accords Peace Institute continued to pursue multilateral cooperation among Accords member countries in an effort to address Sudan’s food and water crises. However, in April 2023, the Sudan civil war broke out, devastating the country and preventing further cooperative initiatives. Looking ahead, U.S. leadership can play an important role in helping to stabilize Sudan and return it to the path of peace and development to include formal ties with Israel.

In September 2023, at the G20 summit in New Delhi, the U.S., India, the UAE, Saudi Arabia, the European Union (EU), France, Germany, and Italy signed an MOU on the principles of an India–Middle East–Europe Economic Corridor. IMEC represented a trailblazing vision for an overland corridor of trade, energy, and digital connectivity linking India to Europe via the Middle East. While Jordan and Israel were not signatories at the time, it was clear to all that they were both key nodes along the planned corridor and that realizing IMEC would require unprecedented cooperation and integration among the countries of the region. On September 20, 2023, Fox News aired an interview with Saudi Crown Prince Mohammed bin Salman in which he noted that “every day, we get closer” to normalizing relations with Israel. The region was ripe for historic change.

However, on October 7, 2023, Hamas launched its massive terrorist attack from Gaza, carrying out the worst massacre of Jews since the Holocaust and kidnapping 251 hostages. Hamas documents indicate that the Iranian-sponsored terrorist group was deeply worried by the prospect of a Saudi–Israel deal and regional normalization and that this was a key reason for its decision to execute the long-planned attack. Then, on October 8, Hezbollah began to launch missiles at Israel along the Lebanese border. A multifront war ensued.

The ongoing war, and particularly Israel’s operations in Gaza, has had an impact on The Abraham Accords, but diplomatic ties have remained stable. Bahrain and the UAE, for example, clearly condemned Hamas’s attack while also criticizing Israel’s response, embassies for the most part remained open, and high-level diplomatic meetings continued, including visits by Israel’s President and Foreign Minister to the UAE and by Israel’s Transportation Minister to Morocco. Trade ties were maintained with the UAE, Bahrain, Morocco, Egypt, and Jordan all recording a growth in their trade with Israel in 2024 compared to year over year in 2023. In the first half of 2025, Israel’s trade with Morocco, Jordan, and Egypt continued to grow, and trade with the UAE and Bahrain returned to approximately 2023 levels. Israel’s strategic and security cooperation with its Abraham Accords partners also continued.

At the same time, the expressions of warm people-to-people peace that had characterized The Abraham Accords up to that point significantly decreased. Public opinion toward Israel in the Accords countries, as in other parts of the Arab and Muslim world, took a downturn as mainstream media outlets across the Arab world portrayed Israel’s action in Gaza in a highly negative light. This contributed to some anti-normalization protests. In November 2024, Rabbi Zvi Kogan was murdered in Abu Dhabi. Though UAE authorities acted swiftly and decisively to find Kogan’s killers, the Chabad emissary’s brutal death nevertheless raised questions about the safety of those wearing visible Jewish symbols. Business ties continued, but often under the surface or with the Israeli elements hidden from view.

The decline in people-to-people ties was significant although certainly not all-encompassing. Several interfaith meetings took place with the participation of rabbis and Jewish leaders from Israel; multiple Moroccan youth delegations, in a number of cases organized by the NGO Sharaka, came to visit Israel; and the Israel–Premier Tech cycling team participated in the UAE Tour in February 2025. The UAE, Bahrain, and Morocco also leveraged the relationships and trust that they had built with their Israeli counterparts to play a key role in the delivery of humanitarian aid to Gaza.

While The Abraham Accords have remained resilient, restoring their positive momentum will require the determined U.S. leadership provided by President Trump as well as commitment from all Accords partners. Two critical missions must now be carried out. The first is to strengthen and deepen existing ties, including on the people-to-people level. The second is to expand regional cooperation, integration, and normalization.

Despite geopolitical tensions, ambitious multilateral initiatives that bring together the U.S., Israel, Arab and Muslim countries, and additional partners can be a key avenue for the advancement of Abraham Accords ties. At the governmental level, such projects could include advancing IMEC; establishing the Middle East Security Alliance envisioned during President Trump's first term; promoting Abraham Accords free-trade areas, special economic treaties, or Qualified Industrial Zones (along the Egypt-Israel model); developing the I2U2 framework; and establishing three-way partnerships in such fields as artificial intelligence research and development, innovation ecosystems, or water security.

On the people-to-people level, such efforts could include programs that bring together American, Israeli, and Arab entrepreneurs, students, researchers, or religious leaders. These programs could take place initially in the U.S. or other neutral locations to minimize sensitivities.

U.S. support in helping The Abraham Accords partners to overcome existing challenges and complete agreements would also be beneficial. This could include involvement in bringing key intergovernmental agreements to conclusion, ensuring smoother ties between financial systems and banks, upgrading border crossing infrastructure, and advancing projects such as Prosperity Green & Blue and the envisioned UAE-Israel Joint R&D Fund.

Beyond multilateral initiatives, expanding bilateral normalization between Israel and additional Arab and Muslim countries will require substantial U.S. effort and investment. Each candidate country's critical national goals and needs should be mapped out, and areas of shared interest or potential cooperation with the U.S. and Israel should be identified. Several countries had made progress toward normalization before October 2023, and each of them should be revisited. The underlying logic and mutual benefits of normalization still hold, and U.S. leadership remains a key element in deepening and expanding the historic Abraham Accords.

Since his first term, President Trump has demonstrated his dedication to advancing peace and his ability to do so successfully. Beyond The Abraham Accords, he has helped to end conflicts and facilitate talks in numerous other regions, including between India and Pakistan, the Democratic Republic of Congo and Rwanda, Cambodia and Thailand, and Armenia and Azerbaijan. Under President Trump's leadership, it will be possible to restore the momentum of Middle East peace as well. The Heritage Foundation is committed to supporting these efforts and to strengthening The Abraham Accords in order to advance U.S. interests in the region and around the world.

Ambassador Robert C. O'Brien (Ret.)

Former National Security Advisor

As National Security Advisor during the negotiation and signing of the Abraham Accords, I was a front-row witness to the most significant breakthrough in Middle East peace in a generation.

The Abraham Accords marked a defining moment of the first Trump Administration and cemented the President's legacy as one of America's great peacemakers. I truly appreciate the role of The Heritage Foundation and, my friend, Colonel Robert Greenway, for commemorating the fifth anniversary of this historic achievement.

The signing ceremony took place on the sun-drenched South Lawn of the White House on September 15, 2020. President Trump, the Prime Minister of Israel, and the Foreign Ministers of UAE and Bahrain were genuinely happy as they added their signatures to the Abraham Accords documents. In the following months, Morocco, Sudan, and Kosovo would also establish diplomatic relations with Israel and join the Accords process. The Kosovars even moved their embassy to Jerusalem.

The foreign policy establishment said such an agreement could never be done. It was not easy, but President Trump empowered his cabinet secretaries, his advisors, and his ambassadors to do everything necessary for the parties to succeed in making the deal. It is impossible to properly give credit to all the American diplomats, NSC staff and presidential advisors involved in bringing the Accords to pass. The same is true for our Israeli, UAE, and Bahraini partners. You know who you are and I am grateful for your efforts. On the American side, this deal would simply not have happened but for the personal involvement at critical moments of President Donald J. Trump and the relentless work of his Counselor, Jared Kushner. The same can be said of the leaders of our partner nations, His Highness Sheikh Mohamed bin Zayed Al Nahyan, President of the United Arab Emirates; His Majesty King Hamad bin Isa Al Khalifa, King of Bahrain; and His Excellency Benjamin Netanyahu, Prime Minister of Israel.

The Abraham Accords strengthened America's alliances, enhanced regional stability, and opened new avenues for U.S. trade, investment, and innovation in the Middle East. By fostering unprecedented diplomatic, economic, and security channels between Israel and Arab states, the Accords created a vital framework for cooperation in the region. Built on the unshakeable U.S.–Israel relationship, the Accords reaffirmed our commitment to Israel's well-being while expanding the circle of peace to America's Arab partners.

The impact of the Accords was transformative: Over a million Israeli tourists visited their new peace partners, and billions in trade and investment flowed between the nations. The Accords also sparked remarkable interfaith dialogues, fostering tolerance and understanding among Jews, Muslims, and Christians. These achievements demonstrate that when the United States leads with resolve, determination, and creativity, we can break down barriers and achieve historic change.

This American diplomatic effort, led by President Trump, to make peace will resonate throughout the ages of history. Securing peace is in the greatest tradition of American foreign policy and the Judeo-Christian principles upon which our nation was founded. In his Sermon on the Mount, Jesus said, "blessed are the peacemakers, for they shall be called sons of God" (Matthew 5:9). Such will be the legacy of those that helped secure the Abraham Accords.

Meir Ben Shabbat

Former Israeli National Security Advisor

The Abraham Accords are more than a series of diplomatic agreements. They are a historic recognition that the children of Abraham—Jews, Muslims, and Christians alike—can live not as enemies but as partners, building together a shared future of peace, tolerance, and mutual respect.

As we celebrate five years since these agreements of peace and normalization, we reaffirm our belief that the pursuit of peace through strength is not only a strategic goal, but our sacred duty to future generations.

I am deeply grateful for having had the privilege of serving as Israel's National Security Advisor during those extraordinary days in which The Abraham Accords were first formulated. I was honored to lead Israel's first delegations to the United Arab Emirates and the Kingdom of Bahrain, laying the foundations for the flourishing of relations between our nations. As the son of Moroccan immigrants to Israel, I will never forget the honor of leading Israel's delegation to meet His Majesty King Mohammed VI, alongside our dear colleagues from the United States.

The Abraham Accords were made possible by the courage of leaders willing to abandon old paradigms and conventions, and embrace new strategies and approaches. They were also made possible by the unbreakable alliance between the United States and Israel, and by the bold vision and steadfast determination of President Donald J. Trump. Under the Trump Administration, the warm and close cooperation between Israel and the U.S. allowed us to achieve diplomatic breakthroughs that many once thought impossible.

The difficult war in which Israel has been engaged since October 7, 2023 is against the very forces that opposed—and still oppose—normalization and cooperation, whether out of loyalty to the Shiite ayatollah regime's nightmarish vision, or to radical ideologies within Sunni Islam. A decisive victory for Israel in this war will also be a victory over these forces of rejectionism.

Already, the past two years have shown us the power of The Abraham Accords in the face of conflict and tensions. Despite Hamas' massacre, and the multi-front war that ensued against Iran and its allies, The Abraham Accords have endured and even deepened. This resilience is itself a message: peace grounded in shared values and mutual benefit can withstand even the harshest tests.

Today, through my work as Chair of the Misgav Institute for National Security, I remain dedicated to advancing this vision—strengthening and expanding Israel's ties with our Abraham Accords partners. Over the past five years, The Abraham Accords have opened the door to new possibilities for trade, investment, and innovation. They have created frameworks for cultural exchange, scientific exploration, and cooperation in healthcare, sports and countless other areas. They have strengthened the camp of moderation, and enabled groundbreaking opportunities for interfaith dialogue. It is now time to take these historic agreements to the next level.

I would like to extend my most heartfelt appreciation to our friends at The Heritage Foundation for their partnership in this effort. Under the leadership of Dr. Victoria Coates and Robert Greenway, Heritage has embraced the mission of deepening and advancing the Accords in ways which benefit the United States and the entire region. Together we can ensure that these agreements are not only remembered as an important achievement of the past, but that they continue to serve as a guiding light towards a peaceful and prosperous future.

The Honorable Sebastian Kurz

Former Federal Chancellor, Republic of Austria

The Abraham Accords mark one of the most important diplomatic achievements of the 21st century.

Before the initial launch five years ago, peace agreements between the Arab world and Israel almost seemed like an indefinite process, with the last breakthrough of the Israel–Jordan Peace Treaty being almost three decades away. Today this picture has completely changed. We see that The Abraham Accords not only normalized relations between states but facilitated the acceptance of the State of Israel, built a sustainable bridge between the Arab and Western Worlds and paved the way to unlock the full potential of a prospering Middle East.

In the five years since their signing, The Abraham Accords have brought people and nations together in unprecedented ways. Partnerships have deepened across sectors—from economic cooperation and technological exchange to cultural dialogue and shared security. We have seen innovation move from idea to action, creation of partnerships, and a renewed sense of possibility take root in a region long defined by division. These relationships are not just agreements on paper; they are lived, daily commitments to building a better future together.

Yet, the journey is far from over. The Abraham Accords are not a completed chapter, but the foundation of an evolving story that requires vision, leadership, and continued international support. They have already proven that cooperation is not a zero-sum game—that when nations choose dialogue over discord, the rewards are shared by all. A stable, secure, and thriving Middle East has the potential to shape global energy, security, and innovation for generations to come.

The Abraham Accords remind us that peace is possible, that trust can be built, and that together, nations can unlock opportunities far greater than they could achieve alone. What happens in the Middle East will continue to matter for the entire world. The path forward, illuminated by The Abraham Accords, offers hope for a future defined not by conflict, but by cooperation and shared prosperity.

The Honorable Joni Ernst

U.S. Senator, Iowa

On September 15, 2020, President Trump forged The Abraham Accords, facilitating the greatest deal between Israel and Arab countries in modern history.

Five years later, the Accords remain resilient, proving to be a cornerstone of regional stability and cooperation. As a combat veteran who served in the Middle East, I saw firsthand the complexities and strategic importance of the region. The Accords have led to increased trade, economic, and defense ties to create long-term stability.

Recognizing that Congress must continue to expand and reinforce the Accords, I helped establish the bipartisan and bicameral Senate Abraham Accords Caucus. Through my work within the caucus and my role in the Senate Armed Services Committee, I was proud to lead efforts such as the DEFEND Act, which establishes an integrated air and missile defense strategy partnership with our Abraham Accords partners in the region. We have seen this partnership in action when our partners helped Israel defend itself against hundreds of Iranian missiles within the last year. This legislation, paired with other partner-building bills such as the MARITIME Act, STARS Act, and LINK Act, aims to promote maritime security, space cooperation, and joint military training amongst our Accords partners. Together, these efforts reflect the steadfast commitment to maintaining strong American leadership, holding Iran and its proxies accountable, and fostering a safer, more stable Middle East through closer collaboration and advanced defense capabilities.

Not only have the Accords helped create a more secure region, but they have also fostered significant economic and cultural ties between Israel and Arab nations. Trade between Accords members has reached historic highs, driven by free trade agreements and significant investments in sectors such as technology, energy, and infrastructure. Universities and cultural institutions have launched joint academic, artistic, and interfaith initiatives. The Accords have helped create a more secure Middle East and have fostered significant economic and cultural ties between Israel and Arab nations. These developments signal a growing partnership that has promoted mutual understanding and strengthened long-term stability.

The United States must continue building on the Accords to strengthen the relationships of those courageous nations that have established peaceful ties with Israel and look to expanding to new nations such as Saudi Arabia and maybe one day Syria and Lebanon. I look forward to working with the President to usher in a new era of peace and prosperity in the Middle East centered on The Abraham Accords, now and into the future.

UNITED ARAB EMIRATES

Ties between the UAE and Israel have flourished since the August 13, 2020, announcement of normalization during a three-way phone call that included President Donald Trump, then-Abu Dhabi Crown Prince Sheikh Mohammed bin Zayed Al Nahyan, and Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu.

Over a million Israelis visited the UAE following the signing of The Abraham Accords, and cooperation agreements were announced in countless fields, from water recycling, smart agriculture, and precision medicine to fintech, cybersecurity, and AI to space, sports, and the arts. Public celebrations of Jewish holidays took place in the streets of Dubai, several kosher restaurants opened their doors, and the Abrahamic Family House in Abu Dhabi, consisting of a mosque, synagogue, and church standing side by side, provided a shining example of interfaith coexistence.

UAE-Israel trade grew rapidly, reaching approximately $11.5 billion from 2020 through the first half of 2025 according to Israel's Central Bureau of Statistics (CBS). (This number is likely even higher because the CBS statistics do not include services such as cyber and software, mutual investments, or defense and therefore undercount the real value of UAE-Israel economic cooperation.) Trade increased significantly year over year until 2025. In May 2022, Israel and the UAE signed a Comprehensive Economic Partnership Agreement, and officials predicted that bilateral trade would grow to $10 billion a year, which has contributed to continual increases in annual year-over-year trade.

Despite the mutual excitement and numerous agreements, the development of UAE-Israel relations also reflected the challenges involved in building bridges between two societies with very different cultures and no historical connection. Many of the Memoranda of Understanding signed by the two sides failed to evolve into sustained cooperation, often because of differences in business culture, expectations, and goals. Relatively few Emiratis visited Israel, and several of the envisioned government-to-government projects, such as a joint R&D fund, never fully materialized.

However, the UAE-Israel relationship remained resilient following Hamas's October 7, 2023, attack on Israel. UAE President Mohammed bin Zayed Al Nahyan met with Israeli President Isaac Herzog in Dubai in December 2023, and Emirati Presidential Advisor Anwar Gargash declared that the UAE would maintain its relations with Israel despite the war, explaining that "[t]he UAE has taken a strategic decision and strategic decisions are long-term." For the most part, ambassadors remained in place, Emirati airlines continued direct flights, and trade grew in 2024 by 10 percent year over year before declining by 14 percent in the first half (H1) of 2025.

Nevertheless, expressions of the people-to-people peace that had characterized UAE-Israel ties before the war decreased significantly, and economic cooperation continued largely away from the public eye. In November 2024, Israeli Rabbi Zvi Kogan, a Chabad emissary to the UAE, was abducted and murdered. The UAE authorities arrested and sentenced to death three Uzbek nationals in connection with the murder, and Israeli officials suggested that Iran had been involved in the attack.

Throughout the war, the UAE has played a key role in providing humanitarian aid to Gaza. The close coordination was made possible by the bonds of trust and communication that had been built before October 7.

Looking to the future, the foundations of the UAE-Israel relationship remain strong, built on complementary economies, a diverse set of intergovernmental agreements, and a wide array of personal relationships that were developed and fostered before October 7. Nevertheless, a sustained calm in Gaza and substantial investment of political capital from all sides will be necessary to resurrect the public and people-to-people elements of UAE-Israel peace.

Given the strategic importance of both countries to the United States, expanding and enhancing UAE–Israel cooperation should remain a key goal of U.S. policy. Both countries are important U.S. allies and central to advancing American security, diplomatic, and economic interests in the Middle East.

“His Highness pointed out that...The Abraham Accords Peace Agreement is a major turning point in history that embodies the UAE’s belief in peace and in opening fresh prospects for establishing bilateral partnerships, especially in areas of technology, innovation, health, energy, and other fields....

“Our region is one of those that has suffered the most from wars and conflicts. Through peace, we, in the UAE, Israel and the entire region, can direct resources and energies to serving our peoples and paving the way for a better tomorrow,” Sheikh Mohamed added

—EMIRATI PRESIDENT SHEIKH MOHAMED BIN ZAYED AL NAHYAN

“Forty-three years ago, when Egypt and Israel made peace, unfortunately we lost those 43 years of knowing each other better, of working together, and of changing the narrative that many generations of Israelis and Arabs have been living. I think what we are trying to achieve here today is changing the narrative, creating a different future, and building on better hope for us and for our kids and grandkids.

...So it’s time to catch up, to build on a stronger relationship. When I see 300,000 Israelis visiting the UAE in the last year and a half, but at the same time, I see 2 million visitors visiting the Israeli pavilion in Expo in only the last six months, it says how curious and how much we want to know each other.

And this is what I think goes against [the terrorist attack that] happened yesterday. It’s by our standing together, it’s by our people-to-people relationship, it’s by creating a better environment for our businesses to work with each other—that’s the way we can go after the narrative of hate, of incitement, of terror. We will prevail, no doubt....

Ambassador John Rakolta Jr. (Ret.)

Former U.S. Ambassador to the United Arab Emirates

In the annals of modern diplomacy, The Abraham Accords represent one of the most courageous and consequential breakthroughs in the Middle East in a generation.

Five years on, we can now measure the strength of this agreement not only by the documents signed, but by the relationships forged, lives changed, and opportunities unlocked across borders, cultures, and faiths.

When President Trump asked me to serve as U.S. Ambassador to the United Arab Emirates, the region was experiencing a dangerous drift—marked by uncertainty about America’s long-term commitment and widening rifts among key regional players. The UAE, under the visionary leadership of His Highness Sheikh Mohamed bin Zayed Al Nahyan, recognized that the old status quo—one shaped by grievances, suspicion, and missed opportunities—was no longer tenable. It was time for a bold recalibration.

The Abraham Accords were not simply a normalization agreement; they represented a strategic pivot from grievance to opportunity, from identity politics to pragmatic cooperation. For the first time, we saw Arab and Israeli leaders publicly embrace mutual interests in trade, innovation, security, climate resilience, and interfaith tolerance. The accords ushered in a new era—one that redefined what peace could look like in the 21st century Middle East.

As Ambassador, I witnessed firsthand the quiet groundwork laid behind the scenes by President Trump and Jared Kushner. Long before signatures were placed on paper, Emirati and Israeli entrepreneurs, educators, scientists, and artists had already begun to see in each other a shared future. But it took political courage to formalize those instincts—and American leadership to build the scaffolding of trust.

The achievements of the past five years have been remarkable: exponential growth in bilateral trade, a surge in tourism and student exchanges, robust cooperation in AI, energy, and agriculture, and a new generation of young Arabs and Jews who are meeting not as adversaries, but as collaborators. Even amid regional shocks, the Accords have held firm—an anchor of stability and a beacon for other nations weighing the risks and rewards of reconciliation.

But The Abraham Accords must not remain a historical event—they must become a living platform. We must nurture this coalition through sustained engagement, investment in people-to-people diplomacy, and an unshakable commitment to mutual respect and shared prosperity. The United States has a unique role to play—not only as a guarantor of peace but as a catalyst for inclusive growth. That means prioritizing regional integration in our foreign policy, investing in the economic arteries that connect Abraham Accord nations, and insulating this progress from political headwinds.

As we look to the future, we must be ambitious. The Accords should expand to include new nations—particularly in Africa and Asia—who recognize that peace with Israel can be a passport to economic opportunity and regional influence. We should also continue to amplify interfaith collaboration and cultural diplomacy, celebrating the shared Abrahamic values that bind us far more than they divide.

Peace is never easy. It requires vision, sacrifice, and resolve. But five years ago, brave leaders chose hope over history. Now, we have a responsibility to honor their courage by doubling down—not only on what has been achieved, but on what is possible.

It was the privilege of a lifetime to have played a role in this historic chapter. May the next five years of The Abraham Accords prove even more transformative than the first.

KINGDOM OF BAHRAIN

The ties between the State of Israel and the Kingdom of Bahrain are of great significance for several reasons.

Bahrain, with a Shia Muslim majority, has long emphasized religious coexistence as embodied in the King Hamad Global Centre for Coexistence and Tolerance. Manama is home to a Jewish community whose members are citizens of Bahrain and even serve in the Bahraini parliament (Shura Council). Bahrain and Israel have highly complementary economies with great potential for cooperation in numerous fields from energy and water security to fintech and raw materials.

Bahrain–Israel relations are important from a regional security perspective as well. Bahrain is a key U.S. ally, serving as home to the U.S. Naval Forces Central Command, the U.S. Fifth Fleet, and the U.S.-led Combined Maritime Forces. Bahrain, like Israel, sees Iran as a strategic threat.

Bahrain–Israel relations developed gradually but steadily following the signing of The Abraham Accords and the Bahrain–Israel Declaration of Peace, Cooperation, and Constructive Diplomatic Relations on the White House lawn on September 15, 2020. The two countries quickly signed a series of agreements and MOUs in such fields as (among others) financial cooperation, agriculture, small business, tourism, and water. Bahrain’s national carrier, Gulf Air, launched direct commercial flights to Israel in September 2021. Numerous high-level visits included visits by Israel’s President, Prime Minister, and Foreign Minister to Bahrain and Bahrain’s Foreign Minister and Commerce Minister to Israel.

Bahrain–Israel economic ties took longer to develop. The countries began negotiations on a Comprehensive Economic Partnership Agreement, although trade remained relatively low until 2024 when it rose sharply before returning to 2023 levels in the first half of 2025. At the same time, Israeli and Bahraini entrepreneurs and investors gradually became familiar with each other’s business cultures, regulatory environments, expectations, and goals. Bahraini delegations focused on the financial sector and tourism visited Israel, and Israel’s Startup Nation Central helped to organize a Connect2Innovate conference in Manama, bringing together hundreds of entrepreneurs and business leaders from both countries and the broader region.

Bahrain also held religious services at Manama’s House of the Ten Commandments Synagogue and events to mark International Holocaust Remembrance Day.

Following Hamas’s October 7, 2023, attack on Israel, Bahrain’s leadership was notably outspoken in its condemnation of Hamas’s brutal attack. Speaking at the Manama Dialogue, Crown Prince Salman bin Hamad Al Khalifa described Hamas’s attack as “barbaric, horrific, indiscriminate,” noting that Hamas “killed women, children, elderly” and decrying the taking of hostages. At the same time, he also strongly condemned Israel’s military response. Over the course of the war, Bahrain has played an important role in providing humanitarian aid to Gaza, capitalizing on existing relations of trust with Israeli authorities.

Since the onset of the war, Bahrain–Israel diplomatic, trade, and military ties have remained largely stable, although public expressions of warm peace and people-to-people interactions have sharply decreased, in significant part because of negative public opinion in Bahrain. Trade rose by 843 percent in 2024 but then declined in 2025.

Looking ahead, the potential for expanding Bahrain–Israel cooperation remains immense. Areas with particularly high potential include financial services and fintech, energy and energy efficiency, water security and desalination, agritech, cybersecurity, and critical infrastructure protection. Bahrain’s history of religious tolerance provides a solid basis for cultivating Jewish–Muslim ties, but determined efforts will be required to create the political and societal space for rebuilding people-to-people ties. The importance of both Bahrain and Israel to U.S. security interests in the Middle East provides further fertile ground for trilateral and multilateral defense and security cooperation.

“ [We] are confident that this visit has an important role in consolidating relations between our two countries, and supporting our common aspirations in terms of consolidating peace and sustainable development in the region and the world.... We value and appreciate the developments witnessed in the relations between our two countries, since the signing of The Abraham Accords, and the Declaration in Support of Peace, which opens broader horizons for spreading the culture of peace and promoting security, stability and peace in the Middle East and the world.

—HIS MAJESTY KING HAMAD BIN ISA AL KHALIFA OF BAHRAIN

“ I join you here on behalf of the Kingdom of Bahrain, a nation which has always been convinced in the importance of peace, dialogue, coexistence, and mutual respect, principles which are fully reflected and embodied in the vision of His Majesty King Hamad bin Isa Al Khalifa and the policies implemented by the government led by His Royal Highness Prince Salman bin Hamad Al Khalifa.

This is an important and timely meeting, and an opportunity to build on the historic 2020 Abraham Accords with a huge scope for growing the region's prosperity, safeguarding its security, and realizing the aspirations of all its peoples. The need to do so is made more urgent by recent developments such as the Houthi terrorist militia's continued attacks on civilian energy infrastructure, the ongoing threat from terrorist organizations such as Hizballah and other proxy groups, and the need to resolve the Iranian nuclear file.

So we need to put into practice the principles behind the accords, namely those of dialogue, cooperation, and mutual respect. We need to establish genuine, sustainable coexistence and interdependence between participants, building genuine networks of cooperation and trust to advance our common security and prosperity. By doing so, we will demonstrate to the whole region what can be achieved by working together and show how, collectively, we can overcome shared regional challenges and seize opportunities in a way that would not [be] possible individually....

KINGDOM OF MOROCCO

On December 10, 2020, following a phone call with Morocco's King Mohammed VI, President Donald Trump announced that Morocco and Israel would establish full diplomatic relations.

On the same day, President Trump issued a proclamation recognizing Moroccan sovereignty over Western Sahara and endorsing Morocco's autonomy plan. Twelve days later, an Israeli delegation led by National Security Advisor Meir Ben Shabbat and an American delegation led by Senior Advisor to the President Jared Kushner arrived in Rabat for the signing of a U.S.–Morocco–Israel tripartite agreement. This normalization agreement built on the centuries-old ties between the Muslim and Jewish communities in Morocco and was particularly well-received by the hundreds of thousands of Israelis with Moroccan roots.

Normalization led to a flourishing of ties in diverse areas. Economic and business agreements were signed in fields critical to both countries' economies and societies, such as desalination, water management, smart agriculture, green hydrogen, and AI. Numerous ministers and senior military officers from each country exchanged visits, and Israel transitioned from observer status to active participation in AFRICOM's U.S.-led African Lion military exercises, which were hosted in Morocco. In July 2023, Israel recognized Moroccan sovereignty over Western Sahara in a move appreciated by Rabat.

Of The Abraham Accords members, Morocco saw the most extensive civil society cooperation with Israel following normalization. Numerous youth delegations traveled in both directions, music festivals showcased Moroccan and Israeli artists, and rabbis and imams gathered in Morocco to advance interfaith dialogue. Moroccan students began to study at Israeli universities. In May 2023, nearly 100 female business leaders from Israel, Morocco, and other countries across Africa, the Middle East, Europe, and North America gathered in Marrakech for the Women Connect to Innovate summit co-organized by Israel's Startup Nation Central and Morocco's Consensus Public Relations.

Since Hamas's October 7, 2023, attack on Israel, anti-normalization protests have taken place in several cities across Morocco. Nevertheless, the government has been steadfast in maintaining its relations with Israel, keeping the head of its Liaison Office in Tel Aviv in place, allowing Israel's Transportation Minister to attend a February 2025 conference in Marrakech, and advancing several large-scale military deals. Bilateral trade between the countries continued to grow year over year in 2024 compared to 2023 and the first half of 2025 compared to the first half of 2024. In addition, throughout the war, Moroccan youth delegations have continued to visit Israel and express their support for the fight against Hamas despite facing attacks by anti-normalization forces back home.

Nevertheless, as with other countries, many of the expressions of warm and public peace froze following October 7. Although business ties continued below the surface, few public business meetings or events took place. Like the UAE and Bahrain, Morocco leveraged its strong relationships with Israel to play an important role in delivering humanitarian aid to Gaza.

It is likely that, following a period of calm in Gaza, Morocco–Israel ties can be rebuilt given the deep historic and cultural bonds between the countries, the great mutual benefit to be derived from bilateral cooperation, and the common security threats that both countries face. Reestablishing direct flights, increasing the number of delegations traveling between the two countries, and completing bilateral agreements between the governments to facilitate business, economic, and tech collaboration will be critical, as will the role of the United States in promoting Israel–Morocco ties and supporting Moroccan sovereignty in Western Sahara.

“ I am pleased with the steps taken for the resumption of contacts between our two countries. I am convinced that we shall make this momentum sustainable in order to promote the prospects of peace for all peoples in the region.

—HIS MAJESTY KING MOHAMMED VI OF MOROCCO

“ The trilateral declaration signed on the 22nd of December 2020 by Morocco, the USA and Israel came as a natural evolution of these relations and ties, which makes the decision to reestablish relations with Israel, truly based on convictions, as outlined by His Majesty the King...The normalization agreements between Arab countries and Israel created an incredible momentum for peace and prosperity in the entire region. After decades of war and hatred, there is now a unique opportunity for peace. Through dialogue and cooperation, the people in our region can finally reap the fruits of real peace, which can be seen and felt in their everyday lives.

LETTER FROM

Amb. David T. Fischer (Ret.)

United States Ambassador to the Kingdom of Morocco

It is an honor to extend my heartfelt congratulations as we mark five years since the signing of the historic Abraham Accords—agreements that continue to inspire and illuminate the path toward peace and prosperity.

I warmly commend The Heritage Foundation for adopting the critical mission of helping to deepen and expand the Accords.

Being asked by President Donald J. Trump to serve as U.S. Ambassador to the Kingdom of Morocco, America's oldest friend and one of our closest allies, was truly the privilege of a lifetime. Among the most rewarding experiences during my tenure was helping facilitate the U.S.–Morocco–Israel tripartite agreement, paving the way for Morocco's participation in The Abraham Accords.

This landmark achievement was made possible by visionary leadership and remarkable courage. President Trump, His Majesty King Mohammed VI of Morocco, and Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu of Israel demonstrated what can be accomplished through bold vision and unwavering resolve. Drawing on the deep and ancient bonds between the Moroccan and Jewish peoples, as well as our shared commitment to tolerance, innovation, and mutual prosperity, the United States proudly helped establish full diplomatic relations between two of our most important partners—Morocco and Israel.

Parallel to this significant diplomatic breakthrough, the United States recognized Morocco's sovereignty over the Western Sahara, reaffirming our support for Morocco's serious, credible, and realistic autonomy proposal. Israel, too, recognized Moroccan sovereignty over the Western Sahara.

This new chapter in Morocco–Israel relations has ignited a flourishing wave of cooperation. Direct flights were established, connecting these two vibrant nations, trade and technological ties soared, and groundbreaking joint ventures emerged in vital sectors such as water, agriculture, healthcare, and renewable energy. Moreover, hundreds of thousands of Israelis, many tracing their heritage back to Morocco, have traveled to experience the Kingdom's renowned hospitality, breathtaking beauty, and cultural richness. These new ties demonstrated the vast benefits of the strategic decision to choose collaboration over conflict, and bridges over boycotts.

Beyond economics and culture, The Abraham Accords have significantly enhanced our trilateral security cooperation. Facing shared threats from radical organizations and destabilizing regimes, our strengthened partnerships protect and advance America's strategic interests in Africa, the Middle East, and beyond.

As we commemorate this fifth anniversary of The Abraham Accords, we not only celebrate past accomplishments but also look boldly toward the future and all that remains possible. The legacy of these historic agreements transcends symbolism—they provide a clear and actionable blueprint for diplomacy rooted firmly in respect, recognition, and responsibility. I am certain that under the leadership of Dr. Victoria Coates and Robert Greenway, The Heritage Foundation will play a key role in transforming this blueprint into a reality.

May The Abraham Accords continue to serve as a shining beacon of hope and inspiration for the world, bringing peace and prosperity to all the children of Abraham for generations to come.

REPUBLIC OF SUDAN

The announcement by President Trump that Sudan would join The Abraham Accords marked a dramatic shift for a nation that had hosted the 1967 Arab League summit that infamously resulted in the “Three No’s”: no peace with Israel, no recognition of Israel, and no negotiations with Israel.

In the years leading up to this shift, Sudan had even served as a smuggling conduit for Iranian weapons bound for Hamas in Gaza.

On October 23, 2020, following a phone call among President Trump, Prime Minister Netanyahu, Sudan’s Sovereignty Council Head General Abdel Fattah al Burhan, and Prime Minister Abdalla Hamdok, President Trump announced that “[t]he State of Israel and the Republic of Sudan have agreed to make peace.” This breakthrough built on earlier diplomacy, notably Netanyahu’s February 3, 2020, meeting with Burhan in Uganda, and subsequent U.S. discussions—led by Secretary of State Mike Pompeo—regarding Sudan’s removal from the U.S. list of state sponsors of terrorism.

The October call was a moment of great hope. Burhan declared that the emerging agreement would “strengthen our relations and serve the interests of local and regional security, peace and stability.” Hamdok described it as “a new chapter in the history of Sudan.” On January 6, 2021, U.S. Secretary of the Treasury Steven Mnuchin and Sudanese Justice Minister Nasredeen Abdelbari signed The Abraham Accords Declaration in Khartoum. In the same month, Israel’s Intelligence Minister Eli Cohen led a delegation to Khartoum to advance diplomatic, security, and economic cooperation.

Due to the transitional nature of the Sudanese government, a full normalization treaty was never signed. Nevertheless, Israeli entrepreneurs and institutions began to explore ways to assist Sudan in such areas as water management, precision agriculture, health care, and security. Institutions like The Abraham Accords Peace Institute advanced initiatives to harness multilateral cooperation among Accords member countries to improve lives and livelihoods in Sudan.

However, Sudan’s internal political instability disrupted progress. After the October 25, 2021, military coup that dissolved the Sovereign Council, the Biden Administration suspended approximately $700 million in aid and pressured Israel not to upgrade ties with Sudan in the absence of a civilian-led transition. On April 15, 2023, a brutal civil war erupted between the Sudanese Armed Forces (SAF)—led by Burhan—and the Rapid Support Forces (RSF) under Mohamed “Hemedti” Dagalo. The U.S. responded by sanctioning leaders on both sides, including Burhan and Hemedti.

The war has devastated Sudan: Millions have been displaced, mass atrocities have been committed that some allege rise to the level of genocide, and an estimated 25 million Sudanese are facing acute food insecurity. Meanwhile, in the wake of Western disengagement, Iran has reestablished ties with Burhan’s SAF and reportedly has supplied drones and other military support. U.S. leadership remains pivotal both to restoring stability in Sudan—strategically located on the Red Sea and in the Sahel—and to preventing further drift toward Iran.

Once peace returns, the prospects for Sudan–Israel cooperation—and for multilateral Abraham Accords–backed initiatives—are immense. Sudan has expansive arable land but low agricultural output; Israel excels in desert agriculture and irrigation. Sudan enjoys abundant solar potential but suffers from chronic electricity shortages; Israel can offer advanced solar technologies and grid integration expertise. Sudan could emerge as a supplier of raw materials, agricultural goods, and livestock to Israel; Israeli and Accords partners could help to modernize logistics, transportation, and health care. Scholarships and joint innovation hubs could help to cultivate a new generation of Sudanese leaders.

Supporting Sudan’s return to peace, stability, and economic growth—and securing its place within The Abraham Accords—must be a strategic priority. The Khartoum of the future should stand not for the “Three No’s” of 1967, but for a new vision of “Three Yes’s”: yes to peace, yes to normalization, and yes to prosperity.

REPUBLIC OF KOSOVO

On September 4, 2020, in the framework of U.S.-brokered Kosovo–Serbia economic normalization talks, Kosovo and Israel agreed to mutual recognition.

Kosovo went one step further and committed to opening its embassy in Jerusalem, becoming the first European country and the first Muslim-majority country to do so. In establishing its embassy in Israel’s capital, Kosovo followed the example of the United States, which moved its embassy to Jerusalem in 2018.

Since mutual recognition and the establishment of formal diplomatic relations in February 2021, Israel–Kosovo ties have grown at a steady pace.

Numerous ministerial visits have taken place, including visits by Kosovo’s Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of Foreign Affairs to Jerusalem and by Israel’s Tourism, Interior, and Regional Cooperation ministers to Pristina. The countries have signed a visa waiver agreement and other agreements in the fields of science, education, tourism, culture, and even film production.

Cooperation has developed in many other fields as well, including law enforcement, renewable energy, youth, and students. The Kosovo–Israel Chamber of Commerce, established as a nonprofit in Kosovo by Kosovar, Israeli, and American companies, has been notably active in building bridges between business and innovation communities.

Importantly, Holocaust education and the shared fight against antisemitism have played an important role in Kosovo–Israel ties, building on the legacy of Kosovo’s historic Jewish community and the Kosovar Righteous Among the Nations who saved Jews during the Holocaust. This cooperation found expression in an agreement and subsequent joint initiatives between Kosovo’s Ministry of Education and Israel’s Yad Vashem Holocaust Remembrance Center, as well as in Kosovo’s adoption of the International Holocaust Remembrance Alliance working definition of antisemitism.

Following Hamas’s October 7 massacre, Kosovo’s leadership took a clear and uncompromising stance in condemning Hamas and expressing support for Israel. Kosovo’s Chargé d’Affaires Ines Demiri was one of the first foreign diplomats to visit the areas in Israel’s South that were impacted by the Hamas attack, expressing support for the victims and demanding the release of the hostages. Business and diplomatic ties continued despite the ongoing war, and the bilateral visa waiver agreement came into force.

Looking to the future, Kosovo and Israel are still at the outset of developing what promises to be a relationship of great mutual benefit. This relationship is built on the solid foundations of history, culture, and shared economic interests. There is significant potential to expand cooperation in such fields as precision agriculture, health care, education, and manufacturing. Challenges to be overcome include a lack of direct flights, relatively small domestic markets, and a lack of familiarity between the business ecosystems. Given Kosovo’s courageous step in opening its embassy in Jerusalem in line with the policy of the United States, strengthening and expanding Kosovo–Israel ties should be a key priority in the years ahead.

His Excellency Ilir Dugolli

Ambassador of the Republic of Kosovo to the United States of America

It is a privilege to contribute to The Heritage Foundation's 2025 Abraham Accords Five-Year Report and to join friends and partners in marking this important milestone.

For me, it is also an opportunity to reflect on what these five years have meant for my country and for our shared aspirations for peace and cooperation.

For the Republic of Kosovo, the signing of The Abraham Accords in 2020 was more than a historic event in another part of the world. It became a meaningful chapter in our own diplomatic journey. That year opened the door for Kosovo and Israel to establish formal relations, grounded in mutual respect, shared values, and a vision of what nations can achieve when they choose understanding over distance. In formalizing those ties, we took a step that was both distinctive and deeply intentional, a reflection of our commitment to friendship and to the belief that dialogue is always worth pursuing.

Since then, our relationship has grown in substance and warmth. High-level visits in both directions have brought our officials and communities closer together, fostering cooperation in tourism, innovation, trade, and cultural exchange. These are not just agreements on paper, they are genuine partnerships that bring people together and create opportunities for both sides.

There have also been moments that called for quiet solidarity and compassion. In difficult times, Kosovo has sought to be present as a friend, to listen with care, and to offer support in ways that strengthen human connection. Guided by the spirit of peace, we share the hope expressed by many in the international community for the safe return of those held away from their loved ones and for the safeguarding of innocent lives. These are the foundations upon which trust can grow and reconciliation can become possible.

Kosovo's own path, from conflict toward reconciliation and active international partnership, has given us a special appreciation for the patience and persistence that peace requires. Our preservation of Jewish heritage sites, our commitment to remembrance, and our adoption of the International Holocaust Remembrance Alliance's Working Definition of Antisemitism all speak to the values we hold close.

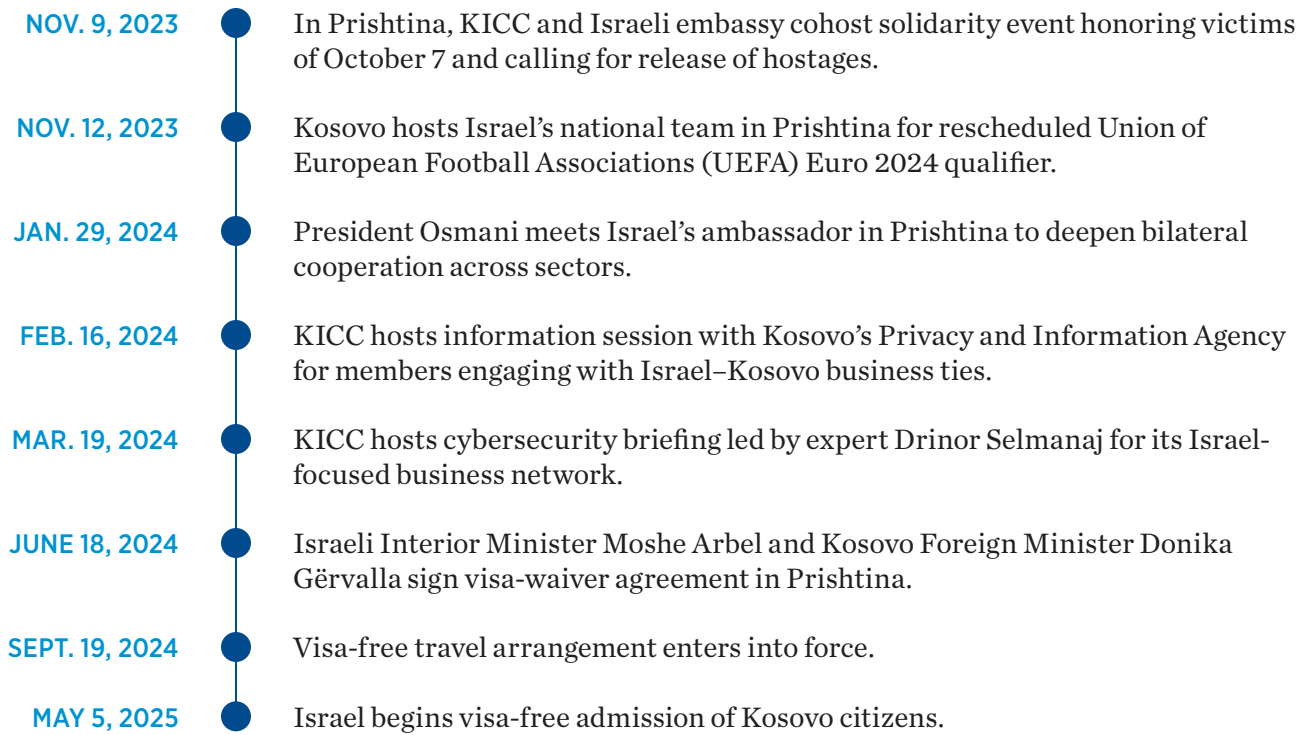

Over the past five years, The Abraham Accords have shown that cooperation can grow even where division once seemed permanent. They remind us that dialogue, respect, and mutual benefit are choices, and that these choices can reshape regions. Kosovo will continue to be part of this effort, working with partners and allies across cultures and continents so that the spirit of the Accords remains a living, growing force.

I thank The Heritage Foundation for its leadership in advancing this vision and for strengthening the bonds between the United States, Israel, Kosovo, and all nations committed to peace. May the next five years bring deeper cooperation, greater understanding, and the hope of a better future fulfilled.

ARAB REPUBLIC OF EGYPT

The Arab Republic of Egypt became Israel's first Middle Eastern peace partner when President Anwar Sadat and Prime Minister Menachem Begin courageously signed a peace treaty brokered by President Jimmy Carter in March 1979 on the White House lawn.

Since the peace agreement, Egypt–Israel security cooperation has become a central element of both countries' national security. Bilateral trade has grown, including through the U.S.-sponsored Qualified Industrial Zones (QIZ) program, established in 2004, which allows goods manufactured in designated zones in Egypt with a required share of Israeli inputs to enter the U.S. market duty-free. Israeli tourists have visited Egypt in large numbers, primarily to enjoy vacation spots in the Sinai Peninsula.

Nevertheless, a warm peace has not developed, and people-to-people ties remain limited. Anti-normalization sentiment—and at times, antisemitic tropes—continue to appear in segments of Egypt's media, educational system, and public discourse.

Two parallel developments in 2020 generated a more positive dynamic in Egypt–Israel relations. The first was the signing of The Abraham Accords, which granted greater legitimacy to open cooperation with Israel and created high-level frameworks, such as the Negev Forum, within which that cooperation could be expressed.

The second was the evolution of Egypt and Israel's strategic interdependence in the field of natural gas. Following the start of production from Israel's Leviathan gas field in 2019, Israel began large-scale gas exports to Egypt in January 2020. Egypt uses Israeli gas both to meet domestic demand and to feed its Idku and Damietta liquefied natural gas (LNG) plants for re-export to Europe and Asia. This partnership has been strengthened through frameworks like the East Mediterranean Gas Forum (established in 2019 and headquartered in Cairo) and trilateral cooperation with the EU.

As a result, 2020–2023 saw growth not only in Egypt–Israel trade and energy cooperation, but also in high-level visits and meetings between senior officials, including meetings of Israel's Prime Minister and President with Egyptian President Abdel Fattah El-Sisi. In a highly notable gesture, President El-Sisi publicly and warmly greeted Israel's Energy Minister Karine Elharrar at the February 2022 Egypt Petroleum Show. While several business and innovation delegations and meetings took place—particularly around the November 2022 COP27 U.N. climate change conference hosted by Egypt in Sharm el-Sheikh—people-to-people ties remained minimal.

Hamas's October 7, 2023, attack and the subsequent war in Gaza led to heightened tensions between Egypt and Israel and increased coordination on issues such as ceasefire negotiations, hostage releases, humanitarian aid, and the Rafah crossing. Egypt–Israel trade nonetheless continued to grow, increasing by 31 percent year over year in 2024 compared to 2023 and by 13 percent in the first half of 2025 compared to the same period in 2024. Several significant agreements and deals in the natural gas sector were announced during this period, including a major long-term export agreement that was announced in August 2025.

There are numerous areas in which Egypt–Israel ties can deepen and expand, delivering substantial mutual benefits in sectors of high national priority. The pace of this expansion will be strongly influenced by developments in Gaza. However, certain critical steps can be taken even before a long-term ceasefire, including the upgrading of the Egypt–Israel Nitzana/El Ouga border crossing, in line with Israeli Government Decision 1522 of May 2022, and the expedited advancement of energy infrastructure projects.

Given America's strategic relationships with both Jerusalem and Cairo, Washington can play an important role in encouraging Egypt's leadership to create political space for people-to-people engagement in such fields as innovation, agriculture, investment, and interfaith dialogue. In light of growing Emirati investment in Egypt, there is also significant potential for trilateral UAE–Egypt–Israel economic cooperation. Once the situation in Sudan stabilizes, Egypt could become a key facilitator of Sudan–Israel trade. As Israel, Jordan, and the Gulf Cooperation Council (GCC) advance the IMEC initiative, it will be important that preservation of Egypt’s vital interests is ensured.

HASHEMITE KINGDOM OF JORDAN

Israel and Jordan signed a peace agreement under American auspices in 1994. The agreement enabled close security cooperation between the countries, and Israel's border with Jordan became one of its quietest.

Trade between the countries grew, and Israel, a world leader in water technologies, became a critical supplier of fresh water to the Hashemite Kingdom. Starting in 2020, Israel also became an important source of natural gas for Jordan. Nevertheless, public opinion toward Israel in Jordan remained largely hostile, and people-to-people ties remained minimal.

The signing of The Abraham Accords in 2020 helped to facilitate the growth of Jordan–Israel ties along several dimensions. Under the sponsorship of the UAE and the U.S., Israel and Jordan agreed to launch the Prosperity Green & Blue” project, a groundbreaking regional initiative under which the UAE’s Masdar would develop in Jordan a 600-megawatt solar photovoltaic project to export electricity to Israel, and Israel would expand desalination capacity to supply up to 200 million cubic meters of water per year to Jordan. Jordan’s King Abdullah II hosted Israel’s President, Prime Minister, Defense Minister, and Foreign Minister in Amman for discussions, and the two countries signed an important aviation agreement to facilitate overflights. While trade grew, however, underdeveloped and insufficient cross-border infrastructure, particularly at the Jordan–Israel Jordan River/ Sheikh Hussein crossing, created bottlenecks.

In September 2023, at the G20 Summit in India, the U.S., the EU, the UAE, Saudi Arabia, India, France, Germany, and Italy signed the India–Middle East–Europe Economic Corridor MOU, which envisions a corridor of trade, energy, and communications connecting India to Europe via the GCC, Jordan, and Israel. While Jordan and Israel were not signatories to the 2023 MOU, they are key nodes in the planned overland trade and transport corridor. In order to realize this vision, Jordan will need a modern rail network, and Jerusalem and Amman will need to increase their cross-border coordination.

Despite the importance of Jordan–Israel ties for both countries, there has been little progress over the past three decades in building people-to-people cooperation. Anti-normalization and anti-Israel sentiment ran high in Jordan even before Hamas’s October 7 attack, fueled both by the Kingdom’s large Palestinian population and by elements in Jordan affiliated with the Muslim Brotherhood.

Hamas’s October 7 attack and the subsequent war led to a decline in Jordan–Israel ties. Jordan recalled its ambassador from Israel and informed the Israeli ambassador, who had left for security reasons, that he was not welcome to return. Jordan also declared that it was suspending activity on the Prosperity Green & Blue project.

At the same time, Israel–Jordan coordination on the delivery of humanitarian aid to Gaza increased. Security cooperation also grew around fears of attempts by Iran and Muslim Brotherhood elements to destabilize the monarchy and launch attacks against Israel from Jordan. During Iran’s April 2024 attack on Israel, Jordan intercepted aerial objects in its airspace, declaring that it would not allow its airspace to be violated by the warring parties.

Israel–Jordan trade continued to climb during this period, rising 7 percent year over year in 2024 compared to 2023 and by 47 percent in the first half of 2025 compared to the same period in 2024. Jordan remains highly dependent on Israeli water exports.

Progress in advancing large-scale regional projects such as IMEC and the Middle East Strategic Alliance that have the potential to reshape the Middle East will require the restoration and enhancement of ties between Jordan and Israel. Prosperity Green & Blue, if successful, can provide a paradigm for the shared benefits of regional cooperation. Both Jordan and Israel are essential to U.S. interests and security in the Middle East. Following the attainment of calm in Gaza, the U.S. should work with both Jordan and Israel to encourage a gradual but sustained warming and expansion of ties in the spirit of The Abraham Accords.

STATE OF ISRAEL

In Israel's Declaration of Independence, proclaimed on May 14, 1948, the newborn Jewish state declared its willingness to "extend our hand to all neighboring states and their peoples in an offer of peace and good neighborliness, and appeal to them to establish bonds of cooperation and mutual help."

But over the coming decades, Israel faced repeated wars and terrorism from its Arab neighbors as it fought for survival in a hostile region.

The first breakthrough toward peace was achieved on March 26, 1979, when Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin and Egyptian President Anwar Sadat signed a peace treaty in a ceremony presided over by U.S. President Jimmy Carter. On October 26, 1994, a second peace treaty was signed, this time between Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin and Jordan's King Hussein, under the auspices of U.S. President Bill Clinton.

Nevertheless, despite the importance of these two treaties, the peace between Israel on one side and Jordan and Egypt on the other remained a cold peace. Peace was established between governments and security forces, and some trade developed, but people-to-people ties remained minimal. For the next 26 years, despite repeated efforts by American Administrations, Middle East peace remained elusive.

In the interim, despite having signed the Oslo Accords with the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) in 1993, Israel faced waves of Palestinian terrorist attacks that reached their height during the Second Intifada. Israeli overtures for a comprehensive peace deal with the newly created Palestinian Authority (PA) were rebuffed. Hamas's takeover of the Gaza Strip in 2007 led to multiple rounds of fighting between Israel and Gaza-based terrorist groups. Nevertheless, many argued that normalization between Israel and additional Arab states could not and should not be advanced until the PA agreed to a final settlement with Israel. According to this convention, Ramallah should and would maintain a veto over progress toward regional peace.

President Donald J. Trump viewed the region differently. In August 2020, President Trump, together with Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu and then-Abu Dhabi Crown Prince and current United Arab Emirates President Mohammed bin Zayed Al Nahyan, shocked the world by announcing an historic agreement to establish full peace and warm relations between the two countries. In his remarks following the announcement, President Trump made clear that this would be a different type of peace, declaring that the two countries would "begin cooperation across the board and on a broad range of areas, including tourism, education, healthcare, trade, and security." Over the next several months, under the leadership of the Trump Administration, peace and normalization between Israel and Bahrain, Sudan, Morocco, and Kosovo would follow.

From Israel's perspective, The Abraham Accords did not just open new possibilities in countless fields from trade and tourism to innovation and investment; they represented the realization of the dream of genuine peace, mutual acceptance, and a shared effort to counter common enemies and shape a brighter future for the Middle East. Millions of Israeli visitors traveled to the countries of The Abraham Accords in order to experience their cultures and attractions and build new ties of friendship and partnership.

The Accords also represented a transformation toward a mindset in which Israel, in addition to being the Start-Up Nation, would be a key regional hub integrated into the broader Middle East / North Africa (MENA) region. Israel would now have the opportunity to play a central role in solving the region's greatest challenges and advancing its development.

Hamas's October 7, 2023, massacre and attack on Israel and the multifront war that ensued forced the Jewish state to focus on countering the existential threats posed by the Iranian ayatollah regime and Muslim Brotherhood-affiliated terrorist groups. The lengthy and complex war created geopolitical tensions while also highlighting the potential for cooperation in such areas as air defense and humanitarian aid. Despite the regional tensions, Israel remained committed to preserving its ties with its Abraham Accords partners.

Following Israel's success in weakening terrorist organizations like Hezbollah and Hamas and, together with the United States, setting back Iran's nuclear and ballistic missile programs, there is now an opportunity to reshape the region in the spirit of The Abraham Accords. From Israel's perspective, The Abraham Accords, built on acceptance, moderation, and win-win cooperation, can provide a model for regional stability and a viable peace with all of its Arab and Muslim neighbors. Despite the ongoing war, it is of critical importance that, to the extent possible, Israel dedicate itself to strengthening existing ties, overcoming barriers to full cooperation, fully integrating into new regional frameworks, and laying the groundwork for future expansion of the circle of peace.

“ [T]his day is a pivot of history. It heralds a new dawn of peace. For thousands of years, the Jewish people have prayed for peace. For decades, the Jewish State has prayed for peace. And this is why, today, we're filled with such profound gratitude.

I am grateful to you, President Trump, for your decisive leadership.... [Y]ou have successfully brokered the historic peace that we are signing today.... To all of Israel's friends in the Middle East, those who are with us today and those who will join us tomorrow, I say: As-salamu alaykum. Peace unto thee. Shalom....

[T]he blessings of the peace we make today will be enormous. First, because this peace will eventually expand to include other Arab states. And, ultimately, it can end the Arab-Israeli conflict once and for all.

Second, because the great economic benefits of our partnership will be felt throughout our region, and they will reach every one of our citizens.

And third, because this is not only a peace between leaders, it's a peace between peoples. Israelis, Emiratis, and Bahrainis are already embracing one another. We are eager to invest in a future of partnership, prosperity, and peace.

—ISRAELI PRIME MINISTER BENJAMIN NETANYAHU

“ Israel aspires to expand The Abraham Accords and circle of peace and normalization in the Middle East.

—ISRAELI FOREIGN MINISTER GIDEON SAAR

LETTER FROM

MK Dan Illouz and MK Michael Biton

Co-Chairs, Abraham Accords Caucus in the Knesset

As we mark the fifth anniversary of The Abraham Accords, we take this opportunity to reflect on a historic achievement that has reshaped the Middle East—and continues to do so even in the face of ongoing regional tensions.

The Abraham Accords were founded on a bold vision of peace to prosperity. Five years on, that vision has not only endured—it has flourished.

Despite the war launched by Hamas against Israel on October 7, 2023, trade between Israel and The Abraham Accords member countries reached an all-time-high in 2024. And while other foreign airlines suspended service to Israel due to the war, Etihad and FlyDubai, the UAE's two national airlines, continue to fly nonstop to Tel Aviv every day.

In matters of security, the Accords have fostered an unprecedented level of regional coordination. While the region continues to face significant challenges, the commitment to cooperation on counterterrorism, intelligence sharing, and strategic defense has only deepened. This was perhaps most evident during Iran's missile attacks against Israel, when numerous missiles were intercepted ahead of time over Gulf airspace. Similarly, Israeli and Moroccan soldiers trained together in Morocco as part of the African Lion military exercise.

It is precisely in times of crisis that the true strength of peace is revealed. The resilience of these agreements in the face of regional turmoil demonstrates their importance and their promise.

President Trump's return to the White House has created a major opportunity to prioritize The Abraham Accords and extend the circle of peace to new countries. We congratulate our friends at The Heritage Foundation on the publication of this Five-Year Abraham Accords Report and look forward to our continued partnership with our greatest ally in the world, the United States of America.

As we look to the future, we reaffirm our shared commitment to expanding and strengthening this alliance of peace. The Abraham Accords Caucus in the Knesset, under our leadership, will continue to play a supportive role in developing these relationships and ensuring they reach their full potential.

Ambassador Yechiel (Michael) Leiter

Israeli Ambassador to the United States

The Abraham Accords were pathbreaking in every way, sui generis as far as international peace agreements go.

The fact that in the context of peacemaking with Arab countries it was not demanded of Israel that territory be relinquished and its security compromised is only part of a much larger achievement. Under the leadership of President Donald J. Trump, stubbornly held diplomatic dogmas, consistent in failure, were abandoned, and conditions for a new regional paradigm of reconciliation were established.

There is an ideational battle within Islamic civilization; it is the battle over whether or not there is going to be an accommodation of Western civilization. It is a battle over reformation, between those in favor of a reformed Islam that accommodates Judeo-Christian civilization, and those interested in keeping Islam's designs on global domination.

For the latter, whether of the extremist Shiite brand led by Iran or the fanatical Sunni brand led by the Muslim Brotherhood and its organizational offshoots, the destruction of Israel, that implant of the West in the heart of Dar al-Islam is the first step. The internal discussion here is whether to accomplish Israel's annihilation in stages—peace treaties that reduce Israel to an ultimately indefensible truncation, or all at once—a ring of fire, in which massive barrages of Iranian ballistic missiles would shatter the center of the country while Iran's proxies invade its borders and slaughter its civilians.

As for the accommodationist reformers, there is recognition that Israel and the Judeo-Christian world are here to stay and both civilizations must live side by side. The genius of the Abraham Accords 1.0 was the empowerment of this strain, and in this sense the Accords went far beyond a technical and local agreement of reconciliation but represented rather a seismic ideational shift in world history.

In this sense, operations Rising Lion and Midnight Hammer were a conceptual and practical extension of the original Abraham Accords and drivers of the Accords' next stage. The degrading of Iran and its proxies removes the threatening shadow hanging over accommodationist Arab states and facilitates their rise and enfranchisement. Israel's pilots cleared the skies for America's B2 pilots to obliterate Iran's nuclear weapons program, but together, both cleared the way for an Abraham Accords 2.0 paradigm.

Once the defeat of Hamas is complete, the voices of moderation, tolerance, and cooperation for everyone's benefit will take center stage. While still in the trenches, pitched in battle against a ghoulish Muslim Brotherhood terror organization, it is hard to lift one's head to see the impending sunlight, but it is certainly there, ready to shine, when the dark clouds of the death cult have been shunted aside.

The folks at The Heritage Foundation are among the few with the courage and foresight to see beyond the clouds. On behalf of Prime Minister Netanyahu and the people of Israel, I would like to express my deepest gratitude to Heritage for adopting the Abraham Accords mission. Through its leadership and scholarship, Heritage ensures that the promise of the Accords is not merely preserved as history, but cultivated as a living force for a shared future of peace and prosperity. I look forward to continued work together making history.

The Abraham Accords Declaration:

We, the undersigned, recognize the importance of maintaining and strengthening peace in the Middle East and around the world based on mutual understanding and coexistence, as well as respect for human dignity and freedom, including religious freedom.

We encourage efforts to promote interfaith and intercultural dialogue to advance a culture of peace among the three Abrahamic religions and all humanity.

We believe that the best way to address challenges is through cooperation and dialogue and that developing friendly relations among States advances the interests of lasting peace in the Middle East and around the world.

We seek tolerance and respect for every person in order to make this world a place where all can enjoy a life of dignity and hope, no matter their race, faith or ethnicity.

We support science, art, medicine, and commerce to inspire humankind, maximize human potential and bring nations closer together.

We seek to end radicalization and conflict to provide all children a better future.

We pursue a vision of peace, security, and prosperity in the Middle East and around the world.

In this spirit, we warmly welcome and are encouraged by the progress already made in establishing diplomatic relations between Israel and its neighbors in the region under the principles of the Abraham Accords. We are encouraged by the ongoing efforts to consolidate and expand such friendly relations based on shared interests and a shared commitment to a better future.
