

ALGERIA

Igeria's economic freedom score is 43.9, making its economy the 164th freest in the 2024 Index of Economic Freedom. Its rating has increased by 0.7 point from last year, and Algeria is ranked 13th out of 14 countries in the Middle East/North Africa region. The country's economic freedom score is lower than the world and regional averages. Algeria's economy is considered "repressed" according to the 2024 Index.

The foundations of economic freedom are not well institutionalized. The judiciary's vulnerability to political interference and corruption undermines sustainable economic development. Despite some progress, the government still needs to improve fiscal governance. Structural reforms to diversify the economic base have achieved only marginal success. Protectionist measures have been used to encourage domestic production. Algeria is one of the world's leading natural gas exporters. Oil and gas account for almost 95 percent of export revenues and more than 30 percent of GDP.

12 ECONOMIC FREEDOMS | ALGERIA

The overall rule of law is weak in Algeria. The country's property rights score is below the world average; its judicial effectiveness score is below the world average; and its government integrity score is below the world average.

The top individual income tax rate is 35 percent, and the top corporate tax rate is 26 percent. The tax burden equals 12.5 percent of GDP. Three-year government spending and budget balance averages are, respectively, 38.9 percent and –7.3 percent of GDP. Public debt amounts to 55.6 percent of GDP.

Algeria's overall regulatory environment is poorly institutionalized and inefficient. The country's business freedom score is far below the world average; its labor freedom score is below the world average; and its monetary freedom score is above the world average.

The trade-weighted average tariff rate is 13.8 percent, and layers of nontariff barriers are in place. Foreign investors generally enjoy only minority status, and restrictions on foreign ownership still limit dynamic investment. Capital markets are underdeveloped, and the financial sector remains dominated by public banks.