Slovenia’s economic freedom score is 65.9, making its economy the 44th freest in the 2024 Index of Economic Freedom. Its rating has decreased by 2.6 points from last year, and Slovenia is ranked 24th out of 44 countries in the Europe region. The country’s economic freedom score is higher than the world average and lower than the regional average. Slovenia’s economy is considered “moderately free” according to the 2024 Index.

The overall regulatory framework has been evolving to promote the emergence of a more vibrant private sector and encourage broad-based employment growth. The Slovenian economy has benefitted from a comparatively high degree of market openness and regulatory efficiency. However, economic dynamism remains constrained by institutional weaknesses that undermine prospects for long-term development. The judicial system remains inefficient and vulnerable to political interference, and corruption, perceived as widespread, continues to be an issue despite some progress in tackling it.
